

2010 Pittsburgh Analytical Chemistry Award

Call for Nominations

The Society for Analytical Chemists of Pittsburgh is accepting nominations for the 31st Annual Pittsburgh Analytical Chemistry Award, which will be presented at the 2010 Pittsburgh Conference. In addition to a cash award, travel costs to the Pittcon[®] 2010 are also included. The award is presented in recognition of significant contributions to the field of analytical chemistry, including:

- Introduction of a significant technique, theory or instrument and
- Providing exceptional training or a fertile environment for progress in analytical chemistry.

To nominate a candidate for the 2010 Pittsburgh Analytical Chemistry Award, please send a nominating letter and the candidate's CV (including a full list of publications, a list of all graduate and postdoctoral students advised, and courses taught for the last 10 years).
